Mr. Wheeler:

Americans deserve a free and open internet. Innovation is the engine that has driven this country and kept it the economic leader of the world. Allowing entrenched interests to prevent forward progress in the selfish interest of their profits via "slow lanes" is inexcusable.

I encourage you to instead protect the multitudes of Americans who rely on an unfettered Internet to keep America innovating. Classify Internet access as a common carrier.

Stop it. Stop these shenanigans. Get your hand out of the ISP lobbyist pockets and remember you're a public servant. Net Neutrality is essential to the continued success and growth of the internet. Don't "revise" anything. This proposal is garbage and you know it is.

I'm writing to express my concern over the proposed FCC regulations by Comcast lobbyist and FCC chairman Tom Wheeler.

I oppose any regulation that affects access to an open internet and agree with many Americans that ISP's be classified as Title II telecommunications services under the Telecommunications Act as it stands today. ISPs should be required to transmit all data without bias and without pay-for-play status - just like telephone companies.

My name is Andrew McAtee and I am from CA. Protecting Net Neutrality is important to me because I believe that internet access is a necessity for modern life, but will be restricted if we don't establish common carrier status for ISPs. Data and information are not finite resources, and we need to keep access to them open and affordable to all. Recently, the FCC has proposed to allow a "fast lane" for Internet Service Providers to charge more for services that are currently included in most data packages. This will cripple many people's ability to get the content and communication they need for everything from building small business to improving community involvement. ISPs were subsidized by taxpayers for a broadband infrastructure meant to provide access and affordability to all citizens, however, they are now strangling taxpayers to pay again for services businesses and citizens have already paid for. Companies already pay for the bandwidth they use, consumers already pay for internet access, and now ISPs are trying to get consumers and companies to pay double because they are unwilling to invest their large profits in their own networks. Ending net neutrality will do irrevocable damage to economic and social growth in America. I urge you to reject the FCC's "fast lane" proposal, and instead begin the process of establishing ISPs as common carriers just like phone service and public utilities. Ignoring this problem will devastate the public's ability to communicate and contribute to your campaign, and any number of other public goods. Thank you very much for your time, and again, I urge you to defend and protect net neutrality.

To whom it may concern,

My name is Janaye Culton, and I am writing to comment on the FCC's recent proposed changes to Net Neutrality.

Allowing Internet Service Providers to give preferential treatment to content providers is contrary to the concept of Net Neutrality. Fundamentally, the word preferential is the opposite of neutral. Any inclusion of restrictions or requirements of "commercially reasonable" terms does not change this fact.

It would be detrimental to competition and innovation by raising the barrier to entry for content providers. New companies would become exceedingly difficult to start because they would not have the wherewithal to pay Internet Service Providers for faster speeds that established companies employ.

If the FCC is truly supportive of Net Neutrality, I urge them to reclassify all Internet Service Providers as Title II Common Carriers as laid out in the Telecommunications Act of 1934. From my understanding, this will force all Internet Service Providers to act as data carriers and restrict them from altering the flow of information in any manner.

I do NOT support allowing Internet Service Providers to give preferential treatment to content providers. Please refrain from implementing this policy.

I ask that the FCC reclassify Internet Service Providers as Title II Common Carriers.

Thank you very much for your time,
Janaye Culton

Dear Chairman Wheeler,

When the Circuit Court of Appeals decided to rule in favor of Comcast in 2010's Comcast v. FCC ruling, its intended message was not to say that some providers are more equal than others. The comments from the bench clearly indicated that the FCC was wrong in its interpretation of the Telecommunications Act, particularly by classifying internet service providers as a Title I "Information" service under the Telecommunications Act.

Many American citizens, myself included, agree with the court that Title I is an inappropriate classification for the companies that, in many cases, are the sole provider (or one of only a small handful of government-mandated monopoly providers) of Internet access. This early classification mistake has led us into a brave new era of payola, "bundled service fees," preferential content prioritizing, and other behavior that would not be out of place in a robber baron's company town in the 19th century.

I strongly urge you to draft new rules that would re-classify Internet Service Providers as Common Carriers under Title II of the Telecommunications Act. This would send a clear and unambiguous message that Internet traffic must not be tampered with in any way or form.

Sincerely,

Gary Ploski

The FCC is bought and sold by Comcast and the rest of the Internet oligopoly and plans to ruining the Internet with this plan while the civilized world (the European Union) stood up and protected the Internet in a way that will lead to innovation and freedom. This plan is called Network Neutrality and it would be the result of Title II protection. US business will move to where there is a more free Internet and thrive there under proper government protections, governments who do not sell out their people.

This is nothing short of facism. Old men who do not understand the technology behind the Internet and the ones being paid to will destroy the economy and impose corporate totalitarianism because they are self interested facists.
